		His final message: 'Don't do anything drastic You are in a dead space in your life. But you will go through it... to a new life.'
V91	Surviving Broken Relationships	Aftermath of broken relationships. (A How-To Series with Clayton Barbeau) In this programme Clayton Barbeau talks about anger and pain that follow a broken relationship. Mr Barbeau assures you that the feelings you experience at this time are natural. He helps you to understand and work with them. You are encouraged to be gentle with yourself and not to hide from those who care about you. Above all, don't rush into a new relationship too soon. Broken hearts do mend, Mr Barbeau assures you; and when they do, they are often more loving and compassionate than those that have not suffered
V92	Surviving Life Transitions	About change that makes up daily living. (A How-To Series with Clayton Barbeau) Your ways of thinking, feeling, being are constantly changing, and there are such challenges as building a new relationship, integrating a new baby into the family, or beginning a new job. Such changes can be very threatening because of fear of the unknown and a kind of "limbo" experience to be lived through as a bridge to the new. Mr Barbeau guides you through the process of change and offers stories and strategies for healthy personal growth. (26 minutes – Adult)
V93	Surviving Anger	About Anger. (A How-To Series with Clayton Barbeau) Clayton Barbeau talks about the different causes of anger and the various guises that anger often takes. We face anger from both ourselves and others, and any number of experiences can trigger it. With the help of anecdotes based in personal experience he shows how important it is to understand the source and destructiveness of one's anger and to face up to it. He proposes strategies for analysing and dealing with one's own anger and with the anger of others. (32 minutes – Adult)
V94	Surviving Difficult People	Living and working with difficult people. Clayton Barbeau gives special attention to the problems individuals who can make day to day living difficult at work or at home. He suggests ways to approach people who tend to bully or to criticise constantly, or those who demand inordinate attention or want control. And he profiles those who can't make a decision or simply won't communicate. It is very important to realise that one's response to a difficult person is more important than that person's behaviour. Adult
V95	Surviving Grief	Grief. Clayton Barbeau helps the viewer to understand the grieving process and work toward acceptance of the loss of a loved one. Mr Barbeau's own experience of grief at the untimely death of his wife gives a unique validity and conviction to his advice. He points out that it is important not to deny one's loss and to give oneself permission to 'feel'; be it tears, loneliness or anger. Above all, he suggests, don't prolong and nurture grief, but take one day at a time and make an effort to begin building a future.
V96	Surviving Failure – Rejection	Valuing self and coping with rejection. (A How-To Series with Clayton Barbeau) Clayton Barbeau explains how important it is for every person to value themselves, because surviving rejection or failure has a lot to do with self-acceptance. It also means realising that it is human, and sometimes even a good thing, to fail or to experience hurt. Using some well chosen anecdotes, Mr Barbeau reveals how paralysing the fear of failure can be, and he points out that all real growth in life – and in intimacy and love – involves risk, even in the face of rejection or failure.
